What is right with what organization – yours, mine, ours, or theirs? It has taken nearly years to research the many program options available for Doctorate level education & is equivalent to a research certificate, if structured and shared (as is a false secondary). Abstract artistic gobs of paint or information is not the same. The goal to become a doctor was established entering middle school, at the age of 13. Establishments are important, and the older and well preserved, the better, like the American Government and its many parts. Although the design of education has changed over the course of many years, the goal to achieve the highest level remains but is ma(e)tricized, yet another marital/merital plural inclusion and confusion. The abundance of online PhD and Doctorate programs with varied subjects, costs, and requirements limits choice. Decisions narrowed to four: 1) Interest, 2) Cost, 3) Predictive Satisfaction, and 4) Future Application – the same as a marital partner. All subject areas were considered, ranging from Computer Science, English, Engineering, Organization Management, even Law and Policy where all are still parts of the whole. Psychology dominates even in Man vs. Machine; school is contained within, but college within requires abstract thinking and explanation of unseen letter additions, beautifully presented by a persona within the collage. Many of the programs found in the research were clinically based, seemingly training crowds for licensure of routine counseling and prescription mental health techniques and methods. “What do you see when you look at this picture” was one of the main questions to start visual perception training and has evolved into digital forensics and linkages that can span across multiple planets, leaving many years of emotions, feelings, and reactions that spark new starts, stops, and finishes of many things. Such experience and exposure to clientele is a non-current deterrent, yet the interest in healthy psychology in an organization or ‘the workplace’ remains, but whose? The questions need not be answered now. My own bookcase is an area of organizational management in need of psychological study and action. It can’t be drowned out or delayed, although it seems an honest act of procrastination, but more important is its surroundings and even the things within it. With many years of formal study in Death, Life, Criminal Justice, Information Technology, and Mental Health, Business, as well as Entrepreneurial Enterprises, the areas of interest are what makes a person or group of people truly enjoy what they do and find honest satisfaction beyond a daily routine, salary, or challenging project. Application is again, equivalent to asking for acceptance or approval, which is routine in formal education systems, of which there is no promise or contractually signed proof. Toying with Time and Intelligence? Freudian mishaps to compare and rule from below or rhyming name rhythmic assumes non-present envy and inequivalent and unfair competition, not to mention the lawfulness of use and mis' firings or the reprioritization based on selection, activity, health, fitness, and other factors. E-ficiency prompts but forbids paperlessness and abandonment, but marital/material swindles gladly engaged in control of odds when mathematically conjectured in graphical and visualness already diseased ridden wrapped with ineptness and unauthorized incubation of gross magnitude points to prison (PTP) – and the gift that perpetually hires filth and distaste. The thought of working with an around prisoners is vial, and more traumatic when one realizes they've been working with parolees for years, secretly assigned, even though the offer of employment was considered and denied. Such secret forcefulness leads to wonder if the criminally insane are of higher priority and smarts than the compliant and structured. Life was once case by case and transitioned to matters of theoretical and philosophical nature, where circumstances change but the goal remains the same. Organizational requirements and human needs still affect the digestive tract, showing a merger of stress, emotions, and feelings with physical evidence of suffering. It's more than a two-year-old question and problem – a Buddhist belief of religious value that Earth is prison. For the unauthorized Asian, African, or Criminal, it is true, even for the extremist or those in denial with a sense or false belief that everyone has a place in this world. Internal and external debate, argument, even exposure to unwanted material continues to harm, as does impoverished surroundings, even if only briefly encountered. The phrase: Someone is purposely trying to hurt me is factual and not a self-conjured belief based on old ideals that if you continue to think so, it will happen.

Completing the Technology and Innovation Program at Aspen has solved problems, but problems cannot be the constant focus of one's educational journey, career, or personal life, nor can past abusers. Advanced studies on the Doctoral level must show proof of more scholarly writing, evaluation, and understanding of complexities of interest with natural inclination to create new strategies for psychology and healing. Complexity and Simplicity could be the general's topic for a three-year study because it is the scale in which learning is managed. Learning is fascinating, as is writing about complex subjects, but not if there are only a select few who understand, they live in a "kill or be killed world, permeating death" or being surrounded by things of hate. Being one of a few or one of billions is directly tied to the central psyche or ego, motivation, willingness, and outcomes is not new. The ability to affect change in industry or obtain a position where education can be applied or shared is often the central motivation, but more important is personal happiness and excitement, extending far beyond the student, which is rapidly taken away because of past failures of once-trusted employers. If there is no potential or understanding, future application is grim or useless and formulaically poised for permanent departure. Learning value is promising, seen as a measurable figure on a chart or transcript, potentially believed to be as simplistic as two plus two or price comparison, while others metaphorically consider it achievement, the journey, and recognition. To achieve the highest level of education in a specific focus area such as computer science, a personal inventory(?), extensive research, and self-evaluation of honest needs, wants, and expectations coupled with reality and visions of the future has uncovered greater passion dealing with a combination of both people and technology. Eating too much, having too much on a plate are metaphors for workload, oddly used as responsibility and cleanliness. Leadership, Change, Human Potential and Motivation, as well as the many other areas of psychology, even neurological function and interactions with technology are still very much of interest and are in fact in need of study or perhaps discontinuance. "You're still only two years old if you must constantly ask why," but intelligence is gained and taught by doing. The research, focused on personal self, with applicability to an entire organization or industry, with or without goals of authoring valuable research for others is not known until the advanced learning begins. Aspen offers an excellent program, in comparison to many others and after it begins, personally set specific goals of both abstract non-specific, leveled, and generalized and obvious, precise, specific, clear, and simplistic on two or more levels, but it's not clear what that yet means and for whom. It's unfair and unwise to set goals for 3 years out, without knowledge of what is to be learned and how it will be used and even worse when words like "prophecy" or "profits" are used. The mean is the average or the most common value in a collection of numbers, presented in both numbers and phrases, qualitative and quantitative, being measure of quality and value. The means is also defined as being able to have the right tools or things to get there. Idiots once ruled science, art, and math; as did idiosyncrocies, recursives, and freedom or constitutional addicts; thus, the reason we still experience hate, resentment, and distrust or summarized as violence – le' revolucion. Sensitivities in professional settings were extremely high, ranging from zero emotion and intelligence to odd forms of display in need of cemeteries and prisons. The spectrums are still ever present on the streets and in buildings, showing there is no human control, and the constitution might not even be effective or the primary document by which Americans govern or rule. If change lingers as a political marketing tactic by a Black President and group (grow up), then damage of the Civil War still also (s)exists, meaning this life is an ongoing struggle to heal or survive it; continuously competing with stupidity and ignorance until the unneighborly flat headed adulterer and multiple glamourized all races and negro's death – separated out because of utter disgust. Quiet ignorance is worse than public gatherings with tear gas and terrorist gear. I would like to dissect the brain and put it in a collage, but word does not convey the pronunciation and correct presentation of the word – again, the lowest technical level of basic use is un-a-veil-able. Physical brain matters do not blend well with mini-micro-racist twitter efforts on whose lives matter more. Freddie Kruger's School Bus to Insanity is over the fence and you're not on it because you're stuck on a train mentality. It's torchestration – the slow boat to firey hell and furiosity. They stretcheder up most treacherously, violently, and celebratory awarding mental modality and deep injury with absence of honorable acknowledgement, therefore, are forced into constant concrete compromisable low and high living – the rise and fall of reactions and appropriateness in life. Already injured and damaged, with no left to pick up the pieces or heal the heart. Left to write from hell.
